Join us to explore the latest advancements in dementia research and the emergence of novel disease-modifying agents for early Alzheimer's Disease.

Australia is on the brink of approval and availability of at least two agents. Comprehensive care will stretch from genetic and risk factor screening, new diagnostic pathways, treatment delivery, adverse events monitoring, follow-up, and after care.

This is an important shift in dementia treatment and care, with profound implications for all health sectors, from primary to tertiary care and substantial shifts in health and aged care budgets.
