Victim-survivors commonly experience a combination of technology-facilitated and in-person abuse.

Drawing on the latest research and practitioner insights this webinar will:

• describe what technology-facilitated coercive control looks like in practice

• provide examples of the different ways that victim-survivors might experience technology-facilitated coercive control

• suggest strategies for face-to-face and telehealth practice.

Please note: This is a re-run of a webinar held in December 2022. There will be no live facilitation or audience questions.
