The personal leadership work to be completed in this programme is an opportunity to orientate yourself inside your leadership thinking.

Leadership is historically judged on actions taken. In large organisational systems, this is often influenced by the expectations of others, perceived norms and boundaries, and a culture of obedience.

This programme invites you to consider a very simple observation: the quality of everything that human beings do depends on the quality of the thinking that we do first. The way we will work together on your Personal Leadership, and on the Mini Appreciative Inquiry where you will engage others, believes that the most important work that leaders have to do is to help people to think better for themselves.
