Join us for an online live event to share the results of our first National Workforce Survey for Parent, Family and Child Mental Health. We asked Australian health, social and community services workers how they rate their capabilities understanding and responding to children's mental health. We'll explore what they told us and discover opportunities to build capability among the workforce to help them support children. Practitioners, service leaders, professional associations, human resources professionals and policymakers alike will find the results interesting and useful to guide their work.
