Australia's peak youth health consumer body will be running a one-day virtual summit on Wednesday 15th of September.

The YHF National Summit will bring thought leaders and policy makers together with passionate young people to discuss the health issues that affect people under 30.

It will focus on three main areas;

How well is the current health system serving young people?

How can policy makers and health advocates work together?

What do young people need from the future of healthcare?
